

Speech Apps with Bluebee Pal Learning Tools

Rebecca Eisenberg, MS, CCC-SLP, is a speech-language pathologist and certified autism specialist. She has worked as a specialist in area of Augmentative and Alternative Communication for over 18 years serving both children and adults with varying disabilities in school and home settings.

The new 4.0 Bluebee Pals are an effective assistive technology tools for speech therapists and add another feature inside a therapist's toolbox. The below list is a recommendation of our favorite speech apps. We encourage you to try your favorite apps as Bluebee connects to any app with a narrative offering an abundance of ever changing content.

Speech Goals & Benefits with Bluebee Pals

- Bluebee can be paired with a variety of different therapeutic apps and provide specific instructions to help your child engage in the activities
- Bluebee can be the teacher by asking questions, giving directions and participating in conversations via text-to-speech communication apps (and picture based too? right?).
- Students can control Bluebee via text-to-speech communication apps and work on goals targeting syntax, semantics and pragmatics
- Bluebee can be connected to a story app and help target sequencing and auditory comprehension
- The media used on Bluebee can be varied and tailored to a specific child's needs.
- Bluebee can be used along with an AAC device to give children a voice. It can be motivating for AAC users to view Bluebee as an AAC user just like them.
- Bluebee can be used to foster communication by pairing them with a phone.
- Bluebee can be used to help build cause effect skills.
- Bluebee can be motivating and engaging, which will in turn help your child initiate communication and access different communicative functions.
